François Bourdon

Managing Partner at Sustainable Market Strategies and Nordis Capital

François Bourdon is a managing partner at Sustainable Market Strategies, an independent consulting firm offering sustainable investment strategies, and managing partner at Nordis Capital, specializing in asset management in the same sector.

An actuary by training, he began his career at La Métropolitaine as an actuarial consultant, then at Desjardins Financial Security as product development manager. He subsequently became a portfolio manager with Elantis, moving on to Fiera Capital when it was established in 2003, where he rose through the ranks to become Chief Investment Officer, a position he held until he left the firm in 2020.

In addition to his vast experience in multiple asset classes, he has developed private and public alternative strategies in real estate, infrastructure, agriculture, commodities and impact investing.

François Bourdon aspires to make a positive contribution to society by using his skills and experience to achieve collective success.
